Customer Reviews

This book is the most detailed book I've found on exactly what I do as a hobby - make home videos of my family. Bob Brandon will show you step by step how to make those home videos more entertaining, exciting, and basically watchable by your family and friends. There was a time when I thought the art of videotaping was pressing the record button and leaving it on until the event was over. The problem with that was if I was filming a 3-hour graduation and mailed the DVD to my family living out of town, they would have to sit through an entire 3-hour graduation on tape without the view ever leaving the stage! I didn't realize it was torture for them, they were probably fast-forwarding through half of the event to get the part when my daughter received her diploma, and then fast forward again to the end. I would even hate to watch my own videos! At first I thought I needed better equipment to make the videos better, but then I realized, maybe I ought to read a quick book on technique before I invested money in equipment which may not solve the problem. The first book I picked up was the shortest and cheapest called, "How to How to Shoot Video That Doesn't Suck", by Steve Stockman. This book within minutes gave me the information I desperately needed to make my videos more exciting and I improved significantly immediately after reading this book. I honed Steve's technique as I shot more videos and I wanted to read more in depth following the same basic philosophy but in much more detail. I found Bob Brandon's book in the Library and it provided so much detail in such a clear and concise way of everything a home videographer needed to know on everything from choosing a camera, to planning your shoot, all the through editing.
