Customer Reviews

During the first 20 pages I found three glaring factual errors. These errors concerned topics of which I am certain. This made me wonder how many other mistakes--about things unfamiliar to me--I have read in this book. The entire book is now suspect, in my opinion. What were the mistakes I found? 1. Roman numeral CCXIV is 214, not 109. 2. Internal angles of a hexagon cannot exceed 360. 3. "The Big Dipper" is not the name of a single star. It is another name for Ursa Major.

Anyone who is serious about trivia, DO NOT BUY this book. Anyone who is serious about obtaining correct information, DO NOT BUY this book. We fact-checked many of the answers and they were WRONG. How can you write a trivia book and not even bother to check if the answers are correct or not??? We bought this book to help our children compete in their high school Academic League. After playing for about an hour, they immediately knew some of the answers were wrong. We decided to toss it in the trash because we just didn't know which answers were factually correct and which were not.

Darn.....wish I had not bought this. Each question has the answer right next to it, so not good for the reader. OK if you are reading to someone else to answer. I have the Ultimate All American Quizz and it is multiple choice and you don't get the answer until you answer the question. Much better format.

There were many mistakes in this book. For instance, the first item sold on eBay was a broken laser pointer, not a "broken laser printer", which is what this book says. We went through ~50 questions as a group and found at least 4-5 answers that were just wrong.

I was disturbed by the sloppiness in the book. Did the author not hear of proof reading? It h s had spelling errors, and even worse- some the trivia questions did not have the answer. I would not trust this for answers other than the answers I know to be true. I do not trust the book because I wonder if that sloppiness was carried over to the research. If so, can anyone really trust that all the answers are correct - that several may be wrong, either by poor research or poor typing (note the missing answers). Good proofreading would have made this book good and trustworthy.

Just in glancing at this book I found numerous "facts" that were wrong. For instance:- question number 33. "What number do the Roman numerals CCXVII equal?" The answer the book gives is 109. The correct answer is 217.- question number 66. "What rapper's real name is Marshall Mathers". The book gives no answer.- question number 89. "What was the last horse to win horse racing's Triple Crown?". The answer the book gives is Affirmed. The correct answer is American Pharaoh (as of July 2016).If I have to look up the correct answers to questions I may as well write my own book. Save your money and don't buy this book.

There were some duplicate questions and some poorly worded questions.

Excellent quality & product. Was very impressed with the packaging & condition. This item was a gift & person who received this gift was very, very happy. I recommend this trivia card for any occasion. Will definitely buy more. Happy customer I am ^
