For all those who ask 'How do I get this child to eat?' this is the answer! It is a practical, how-to manual for all professionals working with children who don't want to eat; either those totally tube fed, or those who eat selectively. An interdisciplinary programme, it provides comprehensive solutions across multiple areas. The programme is practical and easy to adapt, and can be used selectively or in its entirety. It contains assessment forms, outcome measures, session plans, case notes and activity suggestions - everything that the therapist needs. It is designed to develop more efficient and effective services for disabled children with aversion to oral feeding, the programme has also been used successfully to treat individuals with physical disabilities, learning disabilities, Autistic Spectrum Disorders, Down's syndrome, sensory processing disorders, and those with complex medical histories but no overt diagnosis. ## Customer Reviews

So much information! Sad that it took relentless persistence for 6 years to get Doctors to acknowledge my daughter has a sensory processing disorder as well as motor planning issues with chewing and swallowing. I found this book at Sick Kids when she was in her first of 3 surgeries to give her some vision. Only read 3 chapters before I simply had to have a copy. We have been to feeding clinics; Autism Specialists dealing with eating aversion through hunger diets; our daughter did not eat anything for 3 days and was hardly able to talk she was so messed up in her sensory system. She did say she was hungry several times- when given the "healthy food choice" she chose hunger over it each time. She is nearly 7 and finally on a waiting list to have her EDS x-rayed. Other thing to note is - think of a food you find disgusting or WILL NOT eat! Now imagine how you would feel if that is all that was available to you for a week!?
